

A-LEVEL

ETHICS, PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION

Overview

We can't wait to welcome you onto your A Level Ethics, Philosophy and Religion course! Our lessons are packed with discussion and debates on a wide variety of topics, including 'Is God Male?' 'Is religion simply a product of the human mind?' and 'Should animal testing be banned?' We will challenge you to think in new ways; developing sophisticated arguments to support your points.

What to expect in lessons

The course is split into three components – Christianity, Philosophy and Ethics. You will have a dedicated teacher for each component.

Support

You will benefit from having a team of highly dedicated, committed teachers who are here to support you throughout the course. You will be provided with a detailed set of resources to further support your learning. Our teachers work hard to ensure you are given personalised, thorough feedback after each assessment; ensuring you are able to achieve the best grade possible.

Outside the classroom

Each year, we take students on a conference to Liverpool or Manchester. We are keen to organise a residential trip next year – possibly to somewhere overseas. Let us know where you would like to go!

Equipment that you will need

We will provide you with the essential textbooks and resources you will need to access the course. However, if you would like to purchase your own additional resources, Illuminate Publishing have produced a set of textbooks specifically designed for this course (Eduqas Religious Studies A Level).

Religious Studies is a really interesting subject to study.

The course includes a lot of group discussion and we have covered some really tricky subjects this year.

Religion is just one part of this fascinating course, we also cover ethics and philosophy making this subject quite broad in its content.

This course provides an excellent grounding in any career that requires analytical and communication skills. It will also be of benefit to any careers that require high level decision making and is highly regarded by universities and employers.